Abstract of the Invention

The present invention relates to a continuous process for producing polymeric nanoparticles of 1 to 100 nm in diameter comprising continuously feeding a reaction mixture comprising at least one type of monomer into a reactor under reaction conditions capable of causing polymerization of said monomer to produce said polymeric nanoparticles.